"A number of visits to national museums and galleries in England."

There are interesting things going on with a number of visits to national museums and galleries in England. This report's purpose is to analyse the data of five chosen museums and galleries for 2013, 2015 and 2014 years and make some conclusions.

According to Social Statistics, the number of visits to British Museum, National and Tate Galleries, Natural History and Science Museums summarized is growing. But we can divide this list into two groups. The first one (British Museum, National and Tate Galleries) had a big spite between 2013 and 2015. The second one lost more than a half of visitors between 2013 and 2015 and then the number of visits started to grow. Why did it happen?

To understand that we can appeal to the news that Natural History and Science Museums introduced admission charges in 2014. It is a substantial difference between two groups which caused the fall of interest in the second one and a rise of interest in the first one. It's interesting that after 2015 all museums and galleries in that list had almost the same rate of growing.

Because of this data we can give several recommendations. ~~Respectively speaking~~ it is not a good idea to have admission charges if you want to increase a number of visitors. And because the rate of growing is rather low after 2015, Galleries and museums should rethink their advertisement.

appeal rate substantial draw on style

In conclusion, it's good to see that an interest in museums is still growing. That draws on a good future to this part of English culture.
